

Junior College Gets Rating

Prestige of Clark Junior college has been increased considerably with acceptance this week of the local institution for membership in the American Association of Junior colleges, according to Dean Lewis Cannell.

Only accredited junior colleges are accepted by the association, which acts as an unofficial accrediting agency in itself, Dean Cannell said. Acceptance of Clark Junior college gives the state of Washington 100 per cent junior college membership, all other junior institutions in the state being members.

Of the more than 550 junior colleges in the nation, about 350 are members of the association, Dean Cannell said.
