

Central Park: Two Clark College athletes will receive scholarships thanks to the second annual K-Rod Memorial Scholarship Run/Walk that took place on Sept. 23. Kalani Rodrigues, a Clark College alumnus and track and field athlete, died in 2004 of brain cancer. But before he died, he envisioned the event to increase awareness of brain cancer research and fund a scholarship in his name. This year's 5 km event had a Hawaiian theme and attracted 55 to 60 runners.

Central Park: Clark College instructors Steven Clark, left, and Steve Woodley are still standing at the K-Rod Run's finish line Sept. 23.

