1. ‘Producers’ wraps up

Tonight is the final night to see Clark College Theatre's production of “The Producers.”

In the production, a Broadway producer and an accountant conspire to raise $2 million in the hopes of staging the worst musical ever and walking off with the profits. The pair seek out the worst director in town and think they have found a surefire flop in “Springtime for Hitler.” Their plans go awry when the production is a success.

The elaborate production features about 400 costumes.

When: 7:30 p.m. tonight.
Where: Clark College’s Gaiser Hall, 1933 Fort Vancouver Way, Vancouver.
Admission: $15.
Telephone: 360-992-2815.

2. American Indian culture showcased

The Native American Traditional Powwow takes place today at Covington Middle School.

The powwow showcases a variety of American Indian dancing styles. Vendors will also be on hand to sell items, and food will be available for purchase.

When: 1-10 p.m. today.
Where: Covington Middle School, 11200 N.E. Rosewood Road, Vancouver.
Admission: Free.
Telephone: 360-604-4000, ext. 1261.

3. Treasures unearthed in Portland

Hundreds of vendors will sell a variety of items at the Portland Antique and Collectible Show this weekend.

Items for sale include pop collectibles, vintage clothing, glassware, turn-of-the-century furniture, antique toys and sports memorabilia.

Visitors can also have items appraised for $5 per item.

When: 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. today and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.
Where: Portland Expo Center, 2060 N. Marine Drive, Portland.
Admission: $7, which is good for both days.
The concert is just one of several weekend entertainment options in Clark County and Portland. Others include a local theater production, an American Indian powwow and Tim Burton's take on "Alice in Wonderland."

1. ‘Producers’ wraps up
   Tonight is the final night to see Clark College Theatre's production of "The Producers."
   In the production, a Broadway producer and an accountant conspire to raise $2 million in the hopes of staging the worst musical ever and walking off with the profits. The pair seek out the worst director in town and think they have found a surefire flop in "Springtime for Hitler." Their plans go awry when the production is a success.
   The elaborate production features about 400 costumes.
   When: 7:30 p.m. tonight.
   Where: Clark College's Gaiser Hall, 1933 Fort Vancouver Way, Vancouver.
   Admission: $15.
   Telephone: 360-992-2815.

2. American Indian culture showcased
   The Native American Traditional Powwow takes place today at Covington Middle School.
   The powwow showcases a variety of American Indian dancing styles. Vendors will also be on hand to sell items, and food will be available for purchase.
   When: 1-10 p.m. today.
   Where: Covington Middle School, 11200 N.E. Rosewood Road, Vancouver.
   Admission: Free.
   Telephone: 360-604-4000, ext. 1261.

3. Treasures unearthed in Portland
   Hundreds of vendors will sell a variety of items at the Portland Antique and Collectible Show this weekend.
   Items for sale include pop collectibles, vintage clothing, glassware, turn-of-the-century furniture, antique toys and sports memorabilia.
   Vendors can also have items appraised for $5 per item.
   When: 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. today and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.
   Where: Portland Expo Center, 2050 N. Marine Drive, Portland.
   Admission: $7, which is good for both days.