

A temporary location

Jolin and Dustin Milberg moved to Clark County with an intent to establish a Vancouver-based theater company.

Their first show came earlier this year and they were encouraged by the enthusiastic support they received.

That's why those who follow the Vancouver theater scene may have been surprised to see Public Playhouse's second production, "The Complete Works of William Shakespeare (abridged)," at CoHo Theater in Portland.

The temporary change is only because there were no Vancouver venues that could handle a multiweek run.

"It was a difficult decision because we really did want to do it in Vancouver," Jolin Milberg said. "Do we not do a show or do we move to Portland and come back to Vancouver for our next show?"

Next up is "A Taffeta Christmas," in December.

It's a play written by Vancouver's Rick Lewis. And, yes, it will be performed here at Clark College.