An Educator Who Struck the Right Chord

Music Building Dedication to Dale Beacock

On September 28, Clark College rededicated its music building in honor of educator, musician, and arts supporter Dale Beacock and celebrated his life filled with education, family, and music.

A Clark College alumni and one of the first inductees into the Washington Music Educators Hall of Fame, Beacock started teaching in 1956. In 1970, he brought the high school jazz festival to Clark, now the Clark College Jazz Festival, which celebrated its 50th anniversary in January 2012. In 1976, he and his wife Susan established the Beacock Music and Education Center, which his son Russ and daughter Gayle continue to operate. Beacock passed away in August 2011.

Susan Beacock, representing the many family members who attended the dedication ceremony, said that Beacock's most important legacy was the "thousands of students he touched. Today is a celebration of this. We know he knows, and we are so very proud of him."

"His spirit is amongst us and here at Clark College forever," said President Bob Knight. "We're honored today to name our building for Dale."

In addition to President Knight and Susan Beacock, speakers included Vice President of Instruction Dr. Tim Cook, Professor of Music April Duvic, Professor of Music Richard Inouye, and Clark College Women's Basketball Coach Al Aldridge.

Dr. Tim Cook spoke about the many bands, orchestras, committees, and groups that Beacock led or was a part of during his time at Clark College, as well as those he participated in the Vancouver community at large. “What a great life he led,” Cook said. “What an amazing impact he had on our students and our campus. In everything he did, he literally struck the right chord.”

Coach Al Aldridge was himself one of the students that Beacock impacted. “Dale was my high school band ‘coach.’ He was a competitor. I picked up a lot from him that I used when I started coaching. He taught me about work ethic, diligence, attention to detail, and about competition. Seeing his name on this building is a constant reminder of all he did for kids.”

When Beacock would walk into rehearsals, “bam! The fun was off and running,” reminisced April Duvic, who worked with him on 13 musical theater productions at Clark and in the Vancouver community. “He cared so much that the music was authentic and played well, and he was always so supportive of the performers. One of my favorite Dale sayings is ‘I’ll do whatever it takes to make sure the cast sounds their best.”

Richard Inouye said that he knew the continued success of the Clark College Music department owed much to the philanthropic, organizational, and educational contributions of Dale Beacock. He echoed what many of the day’s speakers had mentioned they hoped for—that the legacy of Dale Beacock would be heard through the music played in the halls of Clark College.

As the David Bryan Brass Quartet performed and the new building sign was revealed, the music that spread through the Royce E. Pollard Japanese Friendship Garden and beyond made it clear that this would be so.

Clark Board of Trustees Thanks Rhona Sen Hoss

The Clark College Board of Trustees meeting on September 26, held at Clark College at WSU Vancouver, was the last for Rhona Sen Hoss as a trustee. She has been on the board for ten years.

President Bob Knight said that Sen Hoss was “always positive, always smiling” and that she would be greatly missed “as a trustee, but we know you’re not far away, and we will continue to work together.” She will continue her work within the Vancouver education community as the Assistant Development Director/ Major Gifts Officer at Washington State University Vancouver.

Board of Trustees Chair Jada Rupley announced that the board would be honoring its “senior-most trustee”, then introduced new trustee Rekah Strong, who spoke of how influential Sen Hoss has been to her. “I’m not letting her go,” Strong joked, and then continued to say that she sees Sen Hoss as a mentor.

“She has a deep, deep knowledge of the college,” said trustee Jack Burman. “Having that mentor there was very powerful. There are few people who don’t know Rhona because of how well she works with others.”

Many others in attendance, including trustee Sherry Parker, described Sen Hoss as a mentor and a connector. “I appreciate all you’ve done for Clark and the community,” said Parker. “And I know it will continue.”

Rupley also welcomed Sen Hoss’ husband Schuyler Hoss, Regional Representative to the Office of the Governor, to the meeting. “They make quite a team,” said trustee Royce Pollard of Sen Hoss and her husband. He went on to say that “Rhona has been a significant contributor to the forward focus of this college.”

Sen Hoss said that Clark was like one of her children. “There comes a point where you give them everything you can, then you let them go,” Sen Hoss said. “Because you know they’re going to be doing the best ever. I have been privileged to work for Clark College and our community.”

Celebrating Fifty Great Years of Nursing

The Nursing program capped off its year-long 50th anniversary celebration by hosting the third Hilma Speight's Distinguished Lecture on Saturday, September 15 at the Dengerink Administration Building WSU Vancouver campus.

Prior to the morning session, Nursing alumni, current faculty and students, and community nursing professionals enjoyed a slideshow presentation that chronicled 50 years of the Clark College Nursing program.

Director of Nursing Cindy Myers (Class #50) gave the welcoming remarks. President Bob Knight; Vice President of Instruction Dr. Tim Cook; and Vice President of Development, Clark College Foundation Ara Serjoie also spoke.

National nursing keynote speaker Kathleen Bartholomew, MN, RN, presented a lecture entitled "Starting with Ourselves: Building Community in the Nursing Profession" during morning and afternoon sessions. Ms. Bartholomew was nominated in 2012 by Health Leaders Media as one of the top 20 people who are changing healthcare in America. She has authored several books and speaks poignantly to the issues that affect nurses today.

Lunch was hosted at Clark Center between morning and afternoon sessions, allowing attendees to visit the home of the Clark College Nursing program.

Big Changes in Basic Education

At Clark College, it's all about the students. With that in mind, the 2012-2013 academic year will see major changes to the basic education program, from new buildings to new faces.

WELCOMING A NEW LEADER

Larry Ruddell has joined the Clark College staff as the director of basic education. More than 1,100 students are taking basic skills classes at Clark College during fall quarter. Ruddell, whose most recent position before Clark was as director of adult basic skills at Wenatchee Valley College, is responsible for overseeing all of the classes and programs for these students.

“When people learn better skills, they are able to get better jobs and build a better life for themselves and their families,” said Ruddell. “That helps us all build a stronger community and state.” For him, that’s what basic education is all about.

MOVING TO THE MAIN CAMPUS AND TAKING THE NEXT STEP

Ruddell will also be overseeing basic education’s relocation from Town Plaza to the space on Main Campus previously occupied by Corporate and Continuing Education during winter quarter 2013. They will be housed in the “T” Building, located on the west side of Fort Vancouver Way across from the Penguin Union Building.

“This move will give students more access to college resources and new pathways to success. That’s very exciting,” he said.

CELEBRATING ADULT LITERACY WEEK, OCTOBER 15TH AND BEYOND

The week of October 15-19 marks the annual Washington Adult Literacy Week. However, efforts to promote literacy go far beyond one week at Clark College. On Thursday, October 18, the Student Learning Center will be hosting the Clark County Literacy Fair at Clark College at Town Plaza.

Representatives from the Learning Center, IBEST Program, Fort Vancouver Regional Library, Lutheran Community Services, SW Center for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing, the ARC of Southwest Washington and many others will educate attendees about free and low cost learning opportunities available in the Vancouver area. On November 1, the Learning Center will also be hosting a Family Literacy Night with stories, games, and crafts for the whole family.

The excitement will continue into 2013. Ruddell says that the basic education department plans to continue to focus on literacy with events during the week of President Knight’s State of the College Address in January 2013, which will also mark the department’s official move to the main campus.

Kickoff of the FYE Mentor Program

You scream, I scream, We all scream for Ice cream!

On the afternoon of Friday, September 21, the First Year Experience (FYE) Mentor Program had its official kickoff event—an ice cream social. Thirty mentees, new students at Clark College in Fall 2012, met their mentors for introductions and ice cream. Some students were nervous, but many were simply excited to make a good connection as they start their studies at Clark.

Mentees and mentors had attended orientations prior to the ice cream social and were prepared for the responsibilities that lay ahead. Under the Title III grant and the overlying First Year Experience initiatives, the FYE Mentor Program matches new students with volunteer staff and faculty members for a mentee/mentor relationship. The goal of the program is to help students get started on the right foot, and have a contact person to connect with on campus. Mentors and mentees check-in with each other at least three times during the mentee's first quarter—either in person or via phone or email.

As an icebreaker, mentors and mentees were challenged to find five things they had in common before other pairs could. Mentee Daryl Bunn and Mentor and Political Science Adjunct Faculty Tim McPharlin were among the first pairs to meet this challenge. After enjoying their success and a bowl of ice cream together, they were off to find Daryl's classrooms and shortcuts around campus.

"Tim gave me a lot of tips and helped to make my start at Clark a lot easier with the feeling that the staff really care for the students," said Daryl.

Tim says he is glad to see Clark take student success to the "Next Step", and that is exactly the direction in which the First Year Experience program, especially the FYE Mentor Program, is headed.

FYE mentees and mentors meet up to introduce themselves and eat ice cream.

Meet the 2012-2013 Student Ambassadors

No doubt you've seen them around campus. They're usually wearing a blue shirt and a bright smile. They're often on the move, and they're always knowledgeable and very, very helpful. That's right—they're the Clark College Student Ambassadors.

The Student Ambassadors lead campus tours, recruit prospective students, and can be seen assisting with on-campus events. Students who are interested in becoming an ambassador go through an application and interview process, and are also chosen based on academic merit.

MEET THE EIGHT STUDENT AMBASSADORS CHOSEN FOR THE 2012-2013 ACADEMIC YEAR.

ALIN RESIGA

Alin was born in Romania and relocated to Portland, Oregon in 1997. Alin graduated from Beaverton High School and chose to go to Clark because he felt that "Clark College has great professors, students and a track team for a fraction of the cost." Since then he has enjoyed being a Student Ambassador, joining the engineering club and the Track team. Alin believes the best part of being a student ambassador is meeting new students.

BEN AUSTIN

Ben Austin is in his second year studying here at Clark College. After graduating from Washougal High School, he decided to attend Clark because of the great learning environment and quality classes that it offers. He plans on transferring to the University of Washington and will major in biomedical engineering. According to Ben, "coming to Clark has been a great learning experience, and I've met a lot of great people and made a few good friends, too." Ben enjoys a good game of ultimate frisbee or ping pong. He loves being a Student Ambassador because he is able to help meet the needs of fellow students, get to know new people, and learn more about our community.

CHERIE CHANDLER

Cherie transferred to Clark in summer 2011 from northern California. She plans to graduate from Clark with an Associates of Arts in spring 2013, then return to the workforce and raise her two boys. When they are both in school full time, she hopes to return to school. She is interested in psychology, economics, and interpersonal communication and hopes to eventually work for the Department of State. Cherie likes Clark's use of technology, active student body, and plethora of PE choices. She loves being able to help students navigate the campus and education system in her role as a Student Ambassador. A native of Vancouver, Cherie likes to spend her spare time hiking and being with her children. "They remind me of the good that's still in the world and why it's worth trying to save," she says.

CARTER ASIVIDO

Carter is in his second year at Clark College, and graduated from Hudson's Bay High School. He is currently a Student Ambassador at Clark College and hopes to gain a Bachelor's Degree in Science at Cal Maritime in Vallejo, California. He loves the time he spends at Clark, but his day doesn't end there. Carter is a very active young man, from hiking and rock climbing to volunteering at multiple organizations. He is looking forward to the months to come as a Student Ambassador at Clark College.

CORRINE MURPHY

Corrine is in her second year student at Clark and graduated from Washougal High School. She is working on completing her AA Transfer degree. This spring, she hopes to graduate from Clark and transfer to WSU Vancouver to get her bachelors in Digital Technology and Culture. Corrine enjoys Clark's friendly atmosphere and beautiful campus. Working as a Student Ambassador is immensely gratifying to her because she loves to help students feel accepted and welcome on campus. Corrine's hobbies include going on spontaneous adventures, reading manga, eating caramel apples, playing classical and steel string guitar, and crabbing at the coast whenever she can.

KASHA BANKS

Kasha Banks is in her second and final year at Clark College. She is studying Social Work and hopes to transfer to Concordia University next fall. Kasha plans to get her Master's degree in Social Work and Minor in Spanish. She loves it at Clark, because everyone is so nice and the campus is beautiful. In her spare time, Kasha loves to hang out with her friends and family, whether it's just relaxing at home or going out to see a movie.

KAT BREWER

Kat Brewer has been attending Clark College for two years. She was here as a Running Start student during her junior and senior year of high school, but this is her first year as an "official" college student. She decided to come to Clark College because of the great programs that it offers. She is studying Pre Law and plans to someday attend law school and become an attorney.

Kat is a second generation Student Ambassador. Her mother Kim Brewer worked as an Ambassador for two years. Kat is very excited about being able to attend Clark College and to start her job as a student Ambassador. Outside of school, Kat enjoys singing, playing guitar, soccer, and any type of art.

KAYLA LOCKARD

Kayla Lockard grew up in Washougal, Washington and attended Washougal High School. She attended the Running Start program at Clark College her senior year and really enjoyed it. She is now continuing at Clark College and working hard to finish her pre-nursing classes and apply for the nursing program by spring of 2013. Kayla wants to earn her Associates of Arts degree in Nursing and then transfer to earn her Bachelors in Nursing at WSUV. She is learning to love Clark College and all of the opportunities it offers its students, along with the great staff and faculty who are always so friendly and fun. She enjoys music and is part of the Clark College Concert Band. She dreams of traveling the world someday and enjoys learning about other cultures.

“Mental Health Mondays” Returns

“If we choose to be alive, we choose to sometimes have anxiety,” said Robert McLellarn, Ph.D. at the first “Mental Health Mondays” lecture on October 1. However when you have an Anxiety Disorder, he went on to say, “it’s like the fire alarm is going off, but there isn’t any fire.”

McLellarn’s lecture was about Anxiety Disorders, from the types of disorders and the behaviors associated with them to the ways to treat them. Clark students, faculty, and staff attending the discussion in the Penguin Student Lounge asked McLellarn about the kind of therapy he practices, Cognitive Behavior Therapy, which safely puts his patients in the situations that they fear.

“A lot of patients say ‘help me get rid of this anxiety.’ It doesn’t work that way,” said McLellarn. “You have to face your fear.”

The “Mental Health Mondays” series offers insights on important social issues, and is sponsored by the Clark College Counseling Center. On October 8, Michael Brooks, Ph.D. gave a talk on ADHD, Aspergers, and Social Anxiety.

UPCOMING DISCUSSIONS INCLUDE:

October 29 – Robert Anderson, LPC: Mindfulness in Therapy

November 5 – Adam Nelson, Ph.D.: Learning Challenges and Traumatic Brain Injuries

November 19 – Jerry Keen: Helping Veterans Get Help
