Clark College announces new associate vice president of Corporate & Continuing Education

Kevin Kussman has been named Clark College's new associate vice president of Corporate & Continuing Education at Clark College.

Kussman came to Clark from Hewlett-Packard (HP), where he served as manager/director of the Worldwide Imaging and Printing Group (IPG) Go-To-Market (GTM)

Talent & Development organization. In that role, the college said Kussman led a global team that developed the talents of 6,800 employees who delivered $24 billion in revenue annually.

Kussman's group earned honors from the American Society of Training and Development (ASTD) and the ROI Institute, which supports best practices and expertise in measurement and evaluation. At HP, Kussman also managed the European Consumer Sales Development Center and managed the mass merchant sales channel in the United States.

Before joining HP, Kussman was a product development and marketing leader for a number of companies across the Pacific Northwest, including Pope & Talbot Inc. and Tree Top Inc.

A resident of Vancouver, Kussman is an active volunteer for the Southwest Washington Chapter of the American Red Cross. He is also a member of Clark County's Amateur Radio Emergency Services team.

"Living in Clark County, I have a deep appreciation for the role that Clark College plays in our region," said Kussman. "I am very excited about joining Clark College Corporate & Continuing Education and being a part of the 'Penguin Nation.' There are so many opportunities for positive impact in the community through both personal enrichment programs and programs focused on generating business growth. I'm especially interested in building new initiatives around healthcare and business readiness."
