

Outstanding alumni

CLARK COLLEGE

These former Clark students were recognized at the alumni-student dinner on June 5:

Barbara Saur, class of '86, has mentored women in Clark College's Displaced Homemaker Program and Mature Learning Program, and in other areas in the community. Her kindness was appreciated by the women she mentored, resulting in more women staying in school.

James R. Martin, class of '68, is the chief investment officer for the M.J. Murdock Charitable Trust and has provided his expertise to many foundations in the community. He's currently on the PeaceHealth Southwest Medical Center Foundation Board of Directors and the Vancouver Rotary Foundation Investment Committee.
