

Classes start at Columbia Tech Center

An estimated 1,200 for-credit students started classes Monday at Columbia Tech Center, a new Clark College branch in East Vancouver.

With CTC open for classes, Clark College has turned its focus on creating a new building dedicated to science, technology, engineering and math, which could break ground as early as 2011 and open in 2013. The building site is located at the corner of Fort Vancouver Way and Mill Plain Boulevard.

In addition, the college is exploring options for a new facility in northern Clark County.