

Clark orchestra to perform

The Clark College Orchestra, under the direction of Donald Appert, will perform Wed., March 10, 7:30 p.m., featuring trombonist Ronald Barron.

The free concert will take place at the Vancouver School of Arts and Academics, 3101 Main St., Vancouver.

Barron, recently-retired principal trombonist with the Boston Symphony, will perform the world premiere of the Palmetto Suite by Eric Ewazen, who is on the faculty of the Julliard School of Music.

Barron will also perform Concertino by David.

The program will also include music by Copland and Strauss.

Barron was principal trombonist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1975 until 2008. In 1974 he shared the highest prize award in the Munich International Competition. He has performed as soloist with several New England-area orchestras and bands. He has given recitals across the U.S., Europe and Japan. He teaches at the New England Conservatory of Music.

The Clark College orchestra will perform Copland's Buckaroo Holiday and conclude with Death and Transfiguration by Richard Strauss.

The concert is free with donation invited at the door. Donald Appert may be reached at 992-2195.
