

Clark College Theater offers season tickets for 2009-2010

Season tickets are now available for the upcoming season at the Clark College Theater.

Looking for Olivia by Steve Coker will be offered in November. The play focuses on Henry Thompson whose life had become boring. But one night fate decides to intervene when his neighbor, Olivia, is locked out of her apartment and Henry's offer of help may change both their lives. Evening performances and one Saturday matinee are planned.

Then in February and March, 2010, the Theater will offer The Producers by Mel Brooks, a musical version of a hit movie by the same name. The play won 12 Tony Awards, more than any other before it. Performances will be offered both with dinner starting at 6 p.m., and without dinner starting at 7:30 p.m.

The season will close in May 2010 with Doubt: A Parable by John Patrick Shanley. This play is a serious drama about complicated human and social issues, and described as elegant and thought provoking. It's also funny. Evening performances and one Saturday matinee are available.

Season tickets are $52 per person. Season tickets may be ordered now by mail. Walk-in and phone orders for season tickets will be taken starting Oct. 26.

Single tickets for Looking for Olivia will begin Oct. 26.
