Clark's dental hygiene students pass exams

Clark College's perfect record with dental hygiene students continues.

The school had 25 second-year students pass the National Board Dental Hygiene Examination, extending its unblemished streak for students passing the exam on the first try to 38 years.

College President Robert K. Knight said Clark College has the only long-standing dental hygiene program in the U.S. that can claim a 100 percent pass rate on the exam.

The test is administered by the Joint Commission on National Dental Examination of the American Dental Association and passing it is required for licensure by each state.
