

2010 WASHINGTON COMMUNITY COLLEGE JOURNALISM AWARDS

Student journalists from Clark College and "The Independent" took third place in the 2010 Washington Community College Journalism competition at Olympic College in Bremerton on May 22. Judges reviewed entries from 12 community colleges and gave awards in 23 categories. "The Independent" earned honors in nine out of 23 categories. Entries reflected news coverage between spring 2009 and winter 2010.

First-place medals

Jordan Frasier, editor-in-chief, for his profile story, "The scariest moment of her life."

Kandra Kent, news editor, for her general news story, "Work study may be punching out its timecard."

Colton Woods, sports editor, for his sports news story, "Baseball club plays the waiting game."

Kevin Vandenburg, opinion editor for his sports feature story, "March of the Penguin men's team."

John Consiglio, life editor, for his headline, "Work study may be punching out its timecard."

Second-place medals

Jordan Frasier, editor-in-chief, comprehensive coverage.

Corinne Mooney, copy editor, comprehensive coverage.

Sam Eckhart, reporter, comprehensive coverage.

Nicole Tolmie, reporter, comprehensive coverage.

Kandra Kent, news editor, sports feature.

Third-place medals

Stephanie Pisarek, reporter, individual commentary.

Alex Cochran, photo editor, sports feature.

Jordan Frasier, editor-in-chief, news photo category.

Chelsea Parkhurst, creative designer, illustrations.