

Clark offers The Producers as dinner theater

The Producers, a 1968 film that became a 2001 Broadway musical and then another film in 2005, will be performed by the Clark College drama department Fri.-Sat., Feb. 19-20 and 26-27, as a dinner theater in Gaiser Hall, Clark College.

The musical will also be offered Thurs., Feb. 25, and Thurs.-Sat., March 4-6, as a non-dinner show.

In The Producers, a musical flops on opening night, after which accountant Leo Bloom arrives at the office of the show's producer, Max Bialystock. While studying Max's books, Leo inadvertently inspires Max to put on a show that is certain to fail. Eventually Leo and Max team up and search for the worst play ever written, settling on Springtime for Hitler. They hire "the worst director in the world." To gain finances for the play, Max has affairs with every old lady across town. The show's star breaks two legs but the show is a success.

Dinner theater tickets are $33, and non-dinner are $15. Dinner will be offered at 6 p.m., and all shows start at 7:30 p.m.

March 6 is Clark College alumni night, with sections of the hall reserved for alums.

Applewood Northwest will provide a selection of meats, vegetables, salads, breads and desserts for the dinner theater.
